PROBLEM FROM USERS OF OUR DIABETES PLATFORM

“WHY CAN’T I CONTROL MY OWN HEALTH DATA? IT’S EVERYWHERE BUT WITH ME.”

NO CONTROL

People can barely access their own data, much less share it.

NO PEOPLE-CENTRIC SERVICE

Patients are the afterthought when institutions say they are trying to drive innovation.

NO SHARING

Moving data for care across systems is nearly impossible. Even within a single trust. Paper anyone?

NO WELLNESS

Healthcare systems don't want your consumer data that you're probably using to manage your health everyday.

HEALTH DATA IS AN ASSET CLASS WITH ACTUAL UTILITY (NOT THE SPECULATION OF NFTS)

THE PROMISE OF WEB3 IS THE ANSWER

Not a strictly Web3 solution, but the promise of privacy from Web3.

Decentralise control over health data. Let consumers control their own health data in the coming internet platform shift.

Crypto Security | Zero-Knowledge Proof | Forward Secrecy | Spinoza's elegant consumer-facing application sitting on the top.

ReNFT: individuals control who sees what, when.

MARKET OPPORTUNITY

DECENTRALISATION OF HEALTH DATA

Data security and privacy

MARK CUBAN - COST PLUS

Washington Post: Cost Plus could have saved Medicare in the US $3Bn in its first year of operation.

AMAZON - ONE HEALTH

Good: Access to healthcare through Prime membership.
Bad: How your data is accessed across biz lines.

Problem: are we giving up control over our health data?

The long read

‘Our health data is about to flow more freely, like it or not’: big tech’s plans for the NHS

The government is about to award a £480m contract to build a vast new database of patient data. But if people don’t trust it, they’ll opt out - I know, because I felt I had to by Cori Crider

What's possible?

spinoza.io

Solve the problem by letting users control who gets to see what health data, when - and for how long.

Instead of giving over data permissions to large organisations, control it yourself: share when and where you need it.
